> HON. THOMAS H. BENTON .- The Washington Globe of last Wednesday evening, after noticing the destruction of Col. Benton's house by fire, says :

"We think it worthy of note to write down that we saw Col. Benton for a few minutes at a quarter past ten o'clock last night, when he was about sitting down to rewrite for this morning's Globe the speech which he made the day before yesterday on the presentation of Gen. Jackson's sword to congress, which he had revised, but had returned to our office THE exercises of this Institution were resumed on the 15th only; the balance he had left in his office, and it was burnt. He said he had it all in his head, and it should come out before he slept.

"We asked him if his house was insured, and he replied, as nearly as we can recollect, as follows: 'No, it was not insured; but I care nothing about that; insurance could not have saved all that I considered valuable-the bed on which my wife died, on which I sleep; her clothes, which were in a trunk setting at the head of it; the articles which she prized most, around it-the last things I saw at night, and the first in the morning-and the papers in the A regular and thorough course of study has been adopted in adjoining room, many of which cannot be supplied. order to graduation, and no efforts will be spared to promote the moral and intellectual welfare of the students. On Sunday the cannonade was still kept up till the afternoon. This ad vance has not been without effect on the native population, whose supplies have been long straitened by the insurgent operations. Chinese of respectability, finding that notwithstanding their liberal contributions no progress is made in the restoration of peace and order, are beginning to grumble. The question of course recurs, could they be worse off if the city was in the hands of the rebels? Anxious as we are to see this sad state of affairs set at rest by the re-establishment of the provincial authorities and that the city should not fall into the hands of lawless banditti, we cannot but admit that the industrious, peaceable inhabitants of Canton have some reason for discontent."

> Mardi Gras .- The festivities of Mardi Gras in New Orleans, last week, exhibited more than usual spirit. On Mordi Gras eve, a grand masked ball was given at the St. Louis Hotel, which is said to have been one of the most elegant and recherche balls ever given in New Orleans. The Picayune says: There was the usual number of debardeurs and matelots, pierrots, Robert Macalres, Jaqua Strops and hooded friars; filles de regiment, Swiss girls, Greek Ladies, queen of night, shepherdesses and Quakeresses. Almost every character in Shakespeare's plays was represented, and Zuleikas, Medoras and "frolic Filtz-fulkes" appeared on the scene.
